"I was less than twenty years old and in for anything when, in 1861, the present
Viceroy, Li Hung Chang, was bracing himself for the final effort to down the Tai Ping rebellion. That was one of the most curious revolts in all history. A to hold his peerage, gathered a band of malcontents about him in southwest China and ravaged the Empire for four-teen years.

"They would probably have over-thrown the dynanty if the Government had not employed European and American officers and done something to put their troops on a modern basis. Any young fellow of intelligence who wanted the job could get a Colonelcy, and I took one and held it for two years of almost continuous fighting.

"My regiment was of Cantonese, the least respected of Chinese soldiery. They were armed at first with ancient matchlocks and wore cuirasses of quilted cotton, and shields and bucklers of wickerwork. Later a partial equipment of muskets was obtained. The men took readily to the drill, but when it came to applying tactics to battle it was with the greatest difficulty that formations and morale could be kept up.

"Their notion of defeating the enemy was to scare him off by hauling on the field huge, painted dragons and turning somersaults, firing at random and uttering fearful cries. The rebels came at us this way, and more than once the white officers had to flee at this Mumbo Jumbo business or be left alone on the field. After awhile, when the effect of a few volleys were seen, our troops braced up, and I have been in several as gallant charges with the bayonet as the Western troops ever made. In success the men were apt to be fierce and cruel and had to be restrained from barbarities.

"I don't know whether I wholly indorse Gen. Ward, an American, and Li Hung Chang's first military instructor, when he said that he could take Chinese where white troops would not go, but I am satisfied that the Japs will have when he arabit have a schill have been in severy and the part and the set when the said that he could take Chinese where white troops would not go, but I am satisfied that the Japs will have "The Chinese stand fatigue and physical suffering well. They are silent under wounds, and as they have religious scruples against amputation, often prefer to die when a surgeon could save them."

BALTIMORE, Aug. 2.—In the development of the Japanese navy, the United States Academy at Annapolis is believed to have had a powerful indirect influence, which will show in a strong light as the war progresses.

From the American Naval Academy have been graduated, since 1873, six talented subjects of the Mikado. One of these had in 1884 risen to the rank of Rear Admiral.

In addition to these, a number of other Japanese students have been at Annapolis in the prisoner.

Policeman Levy III.

Policeman Levy was a very sick man this morning. Last evening he was prostrated at the Tombs. A police surgeon saw him there and certified to Inspector McAvoy that Levy was ill and should be placed on the sick list. Under the rules of the Department a man on the sick list is forbidden to wear his police uniform, so when the defendant appeared in court to-day he was dressed in a business suit of dark blue.

It was 11.35 when, Judge Martine having disposed of sixteen small offenders called to plead, the trial of Levy was resumed.

The examination of the "tulip stem," Bennie Weiss, was resumed by Mr. Osborne at the opening of the proceedings. Lawyer Levy was given the privilege of explaining to the jury that Policeman Levy had not been suspended from the force, but wore citizen's dress because he was on the sick list.

Bennie Weiss, and he has testified that his given name is "Bennie," added nothing to his story as told yesterday, and Mr. Osborne turned him over to Mr. Levy for cross-examination.

Mr. Levy declined the services of Interpreter Dollin, saying that Weiss had been in America thirteen years, long enough to have learned English.

Weiss said he was married in 1888, and liked Capt. Krumm "just as well as any boss" "I did eat and sleep at Capt. Krumm's be held the commendation of the commendation of the commendation of the proceedings.

hasn't been christened yet. It isn't settled whether to call it an overture, peace offering from the machine or ar 'understanding' or a deal between the osses. These things will become more apparent after to-day. This much i many factions in New York City may on ex-Mayor Grace and his New York fight against Tammany. Mr. Grace will most likely be found on the otner side, as he was in 1892. He was then as positive in his statements that he would not aid Tammany as he is now. He pledged himself that under no circumstances would he join hands with the Wigwam forces. He made such promises to ex-Police Justice Henry Murray, now a Tammany leader, then in the County Democracy, and to others. Ask Murray, and if he is disposed to be communicative, he can tell an interesting story. Whether there is a deal or not, with or without his consent, Grace is to be bought off.

The New York State Democracy is not a local body. It is an organization of Democrats principally made up of what is know as supporters of President Cleveland or Anti-Snappers, opposed to the dominant Hill machine. They have been ignored and excluded from the counsels of the party by the Hill-Murphy-Sheehan combination. Their object is to gain recognition and representation in the State Convention and in the advice and management of party affairs

A find which may or may not indicate suicide was reported this morning to person or persons.

Policeman George Bobel took to the station last night a coat and waistcoat which he had found on the bank of the Hudson at One Hundred and Sixty-first street. Pinned to the waistcoat was a Knight of Honor badge, and in the pockets of the coat was a receipt and a letter, both bearing the name and address: "H. Johnston. 172 Carroll street, Brooklyn."

The address given above is the Scandinavian Saliors' Temperance Home. Nobody of the name of H. Johnston was known there. It was said, however, that a man named Nels Johnston had lieft the home on Sunday morning. He came there several weeks ago, and left shortly afterwards for Boston. After an absence of two weeks, he returned Friday, and left again Sunday.

He wore a badge on his waistcoat which the clerk thought was a Knights of Honor. Yesterday a letter was received addressed to Nels Johnston. On the envelope were directions to return it to William Johnston, is Cottage avenue, Quincy, Mass.

It is thought that William Johnston is Nels's brother. Nels Johnston is a sailor and its employed on coastwise schooners.

(Special to The Evening World.)
WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Aug 2-The raid of Sheriff Duffy and his deputies vesterday on "Little Monte Carlo" the gambling resort in Westchester, which has been repeatedly exposed by "The Evening World," seems to have been largely a bluff. The six men who were arrested and held by Justice Thomas last night in $1,000 ball each, had not furnished ball up to noon to-day, but if the statements of Assistant District-Attorney Verplanck are true, the men have not been subjected to the hardship of a confinement in jail and while in the custody of Sherin Duffy, nominally are really said to be enjoying themselves at one of the hotels of this place.

Justice Thomas, when seen by Evening World" reporter to-day, said; "The published reports that the prison er are to be arraigned before me to-day are not true. They waived examina-tion, and I held them each in $1,000 ball, which I required should be furnished by at least two property-owners of this county. not all, the names given are fictitious.

A few moments after hie interview with Justice Thomas the reporter saw Assistant District-Attorney Verplanck. He was indignant at the way his office had been treated in the matter.

"I protested iast night," he said, "against the ball being fixed at $1,000. I wanted it $2,000, but Justice Thomas ruled against me. Justice Thomas told me only a few moments ago that he had reduced the ball to $500, and had comsented to accept certified checks in lieu of the signatures of property holders. Again I protested, calling his attention to the fact that if the prisoners were released in that way they would doubtless return at once and resume their violation of the law.

"My protests were of no avail. This "I have no money," said Hoyt, "but I think if my employer, Mr. Dunlap, the hatter, knew of my position, he would come to my assistance immediately. I know of no reason why I should have been arrested."

"You are entitled to an examination if you want it."

"I'm not ready just now."

The Commissioner fixed the examination for next Monday morning at 11 o'clock and held Hoyt in $19,000 bail, in default of which he was taken to Ludiow Street Jail.

The Secret Service officers refused absolutely to give any information about Hoyt further than that they cansidered him a very dangerous man, and that they regarded the case as of the greatest importance. hatter, knew of my position, he would at once and resume their violation of the law.

"My protests were of no avail. This office is doing everything in its power to break up the gambling and law-breaking in this county, but we seem to be handicapped on every side by officers who should help us."

Continuing, Attorney Verplank said that while ne did not know it to be true, he had learned from good anthority that the prisoners were not in Jail.
